Comments and/or topics and questions for the thesis defence:

Ivana Králíková's thesis discusses seemingly obvious theme of rebellion and mental illness in two American novels from new and original perspective. Its contribution may be even the combination of two coming-of-age novels - The Bell Jar and The Cather in the Rye - which brings fresh and interesting viewpoint on the topic. The thesis is clearly focused, consistently argued, carefully structured, and well supported by evidence. I agree with the supervisor of the thesis that it was a pleasure to read.
