Description:

A study of principal texts in the Old and New Testaments dealing with mission, evangelism, discipling, and renewal, with attention to relevant scholarly debate regarding their significance. (catalog)

The study of principal texts is done both thematically and textually. Major biblical-theological themes of missiological importance are dealt with using scholarly approaches for their meaning and significance in the understanding and practice of Christian mission.

Objectives:

By the conclusion of the course, candidates are expected to be well-informed on biblical-theological issues surrounding Christian mission, and the meaning and significance of the entire biblical canon for the practice and understanding of Christian mission. They are expected to have learned and understood the various approaches and themes of biblical theology relating to the theory and practice of Christian mission and evangelism, and the main theology of mission of the different families of biblical texts especially the New Testament. They should be able to discern the strength and weakness of a theology of mission based on its biblical underpinnings, and be able to conduct biblically-informed missiological studies and research. To these ends the course

- explores major biblical themes relating to mission
- introduces students to the problems and issues of as well as approaches to investigating the meaning of mission in the Bible

- analyzes the theology of mission of the different families of the books of the Bible.

Required Texts:

Requirements:

The class meets twice a week (Tuesday and Thursday from 9:30am to 10:45am). The Tuesday sessions are lecture classes, and most Thursday sessions are seminars.

Class Participation: 10% of the course aggregate.

- Unless previously arranged, regular attendance of all classes (lectures and seminars) and reading of all the required texts (5%).

- Active participation in the seminar discussions (5%).

Papers: (All Papers are to be doubled-spaced using fonts not smaller than 12pt. with at least 1" on the left and right margins)

1. Four brief summary papers (not more than 600 words each) summarizing and reflecting readings and lectures of previous weeks (see the due dates in the schedule). (4X5%) 20%
2. One seminar paper
 MI730: Book-based thematic paper to be presented in the class. This is a thematic paper based on a critical, analytical and interactive review of a previously selected book. The assigned book is to serve as the main source, but candidates are expected to research the theme and use additional sources to make meaningful interaction with, and critiques of the book on the theme. The paper is due one week from the scheduled presentation. 15%
 MI630: A researched seminar paper on "the Great Commission" 15%
1. Research paper of candidate's choice (approximately 12 pages for MI630 and 15 pages for MI730). As a research paper, candidates are expected to thoroughly research all the major publications on the chosen theme. Due date: May 14, 2009 at 9.30 am 30%

Seminar Presentation and Leadership of Discussions: 10% + 10%

Each student will make a presentation of his/her seminar paper (10%) and lead/moderate another seminar session (10%).

Presentation is to be done on the scheduled date and within the stipulated time. Presentation includes raising issues for further discussions and responding to questions.

Moderation/Leadership of Session (10%): The Moderator is expected to briefly summarize the presentation, collect questions from the presenter and the floor as well as raise fresh ones for class discussion and moderate the discussion.

Evaluation:

Grading will be based on the major course components, as follows:

Class participation:	10%
Periodic summary papers	20%
Book-based thematic seminar paper	20%
Presentation of Paper	10%
Moderation of Seminar Session	10%
Research Paper	30%
TOTAL:	100

Course Grading:

The unit of credit is a semester hour, which is defined as one hour of classroom work per week for one semester, or its equivalent. The 4.00 point system is used to compute grade point standing. The grading system is:

A	4.00	Exceptional work: surpassing, markedly outstanding	achievement of course objectives.
B	3.00	Good work: strong, significant achievement of course objectives.
C	2.00	Acceptable work: basic, essential achievement of course objectives.
D	1.00	Marginal work: inadequate, minimal achievement of course objectives.
F	0	Unacceptable work: failure to achieve course objectives.

Incomplete Work:

The official end of each term is 4:00 p.m. on the last day of the examination schedule. This hour is the deadline for handing in all course work. Each instructor may set an earlier deadline for submission of any or all course work. The student must petition the faculty person involved and the student's advisor for permission to receive an "I" at the end of the semester.

A grade of "I" denotes that the work of a course has not been completed due to an unavoidable emergency, which does not include delinquency or attending to church work or other employment. If the work of a course is incomplete at the end of a term without an emergency, a letter grade will be given based on the grades of work done, with incomplete work counted as "F."

Incomplete grades shall be removed one calendar month prior to the close of the following semester unless an earlier date is designated by the Office of the Chief Academic Officer on the individual petition. If the work is not completed by the time designated, the "I" shall be changed to an "F" unless a passing grade can be given based on work already completed or unless special permission is granted by the Chief Academic Officer.

Professors are required to give either a grade or an "I," if approved, to each student registered for credit in a course. Students with Incompletes in two or more classes will not be allowed to enroll in a new semester or term without permission from their Dean.

Educational Assumptions

The Christian faith rests on the personal self-revelation of God in Jesus Christ. Therefore, the philosophy of education at Asbury begins with the Christian faith, which centers in God, as revealed in the person of the Lord Jesus Christ and as witnessed in the Holy Scriptures by the Holy Spirit.

Asbury Seminary, founded upon and committed to a vital evangelical Christian faith, finds its roots in the Wesleyan-Arminian theological tradition, which is summarized in the Articles of Incorporation and in the Statement of Faith. The trustees, officers of administration and faculty members are committed to a style of education in which this faith will permeate all the work and instruction of the Seminary. The theological, ethical and social commitments of the Seminary provide the foundation for its instruction and life. The institution purposes to assist students to grow intellectually, emotionally, physically and spiritually in their lifetime quest of becoming and doing all that God intends.

In general, a theological seminary is an institution of higher learning composed of scholarly teachers, leaders and students dedicated to truth. In the search for truth, the faculty at Asbury Seminary affirms the following guidelines: Scripture, reason, experience and tradition. Learning and growth take place in an atmosphere of love, caring, faith and obedience to God. In this sense, the seminary is the Church at work in the education of its clergy and leaders. The theological seminary serves the same Lord as other parts of the Church, and it makes the same general commitments as any other part of the Body of Christ. The theological seminary, however, seeks to make its central contributions in keeping with its character as an educational institution.

While Asbury Seminary stands within the Wesleyan tradition and holds to a clearly defined statement of faith, the faculty is committed to academic freedom. Central to all academic work at the Seminary are two commitments: the first to Jesus Christ as sovereign Lord and the second to the pursuit of truth as a corporate and personal vocation. Faculty members and students are encouraged to carry on research, lecturing and publishing that reflect a growing knowledge of God and a widening awareness of truth. The faculty members are committed to the objective study and discussion of all theological opinions, and the Seminary regards liberty of conscience as an important dimension of theological and personal integrity.

A Biblical Theology of Ordination – With Particular Attention to the Ordination of Women. A Study by the Biblical Research Committee of the Trans-European Division. of the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists. Endorsed by the Trans-European Division Annual Council on 18 November, 2013 The Index is interactive. As God carries out his mission in the world through Israel, his work becomes closely involved with human concepts which develop in the course of history. 1 Biblical Theology of Mission Dr. Byron Klaus Day One. 2 A Changing Conversation. 3 A discussion about strategies that clarify purpose of the Church in the light of changing times and contexts. 5 The mission of God is participated in by a Spirit-led Church that is a signpost of God’s redemptive kingdom rule in the present and a preview of what redemption is like and a vehicle to carry that mission of God to the ends of the earth. If God is the prime mover in this redemptive saga then, the task of the Church and its leaders is to discern and respond to the initiative of the Spirit which is guiding and empowering God’s redemptive mission. @inproceedings{Snyder2005MI7B, title={MI 730 Biblical Theology of Mission}, author={Howard Austin Snyder}, year={2005} }.
