I chose this as my topic because I am a student with a disability and I have a personal connection to IDEA since I was protected under it until last year when I graduated from the Minneapolis Public Schools system.Â IDEA, which serves individuals until age 21, amended the Education for Handicapped Children Act (EHA), or Public Law 94-142 of 1975. IDEA was re-authorized in 1997 and again in 2004.Â Teachers also need to be open to providing students with disabilities any needed services so that these students can become successful. Under IDEA, it is not fair to deny a student with disabilities or any student a service he or she needs.
